

THE FUTURE OF DIGITAL SIGNING

For the success of your business

SigniFlow Americas has a team of cryptographic experts, experienced engineers and business process automation architects to assist businesses in their digitalisation journey.

Is your company still stuck in the past when it comes to the signing of documents and document management?

The process of physically signing paper documents is not only harmful to the environment, it also costs companies an enormous amount of time and money every day, ultimately slowing down business processes and reducing efficiency and productivity.

Think about this: One 20-page printed document costs on average $1.44 (black and white) to $3.34 (color) to produce, at least five minutes to be printed, another five minutes on average to be scanned, and a minimum of 24 hours to be shipped by the sender alone – before even being analyzed, signed, scanned and shipped back by the receiver. Now, imagine something in this already drawn-out system goes wrong. The entire process would have to start again from the beginning. A digital process, on the other hand, would take an average of 30 minutes, including sending, signing and returning the document – allowing processes to be completed much faster, employees to be more efficient and productive, and costs related to paper, ink, machinery and shipping to be lowered considerably. Our solution is flexible and efficient. It fits into your business model, allowing your company to secure transactions and identities, while complying with internal, national and international standards for digital and electronic signatures.
